SOCIAL SCIENCES THEORY

Course: Social Science (postgraduate)

Code: 3009050

---

Syllabus: This discipline is justified as part of compulsory training by offering an integrated framework of the main principles of analysis applied in the Social Sciences, such as culture, social action, and social structure. The objective is to offer a course that begins in the process of consolidation of the Social Sciences in Sec. XIX as a basis for understanding the contemporary debate. It highlights the dimensions of diversity and continuity in social theory. It seeks to integrate approaches and transcend certain artificial theoretical and disciplinary differences. It highlights the contributions of relevant contemporary theorists such as Pierre Bourdieu and Anthony Giddens. It establishes a framework of theorizing about some of the key orders of contemporary society. Its objectives are to situate the role of theory, metatheory, and concepts in advancing knowledge of the Social Sciences. Acquire advanced knowledge of the main explanatory principles applied in the Social Sciences. Incorporate the original contributions of relevant contemporary theorists. Form an interpretative picture of some of the key ordinances of contemporary society.
